

Peppered moths

Peppered moths have evolved against white moths to camouflage in their environment so they aren't easily spotted by prey, this gives them more time to breed however as the forests are becoming cleaner, the effectiveness of these moths being darker is become less effective.

Source: <https://askabiologist.asu.edu/peppered-moths-game/natural-selection.html>

1. Finchers beaks have gotten longer and wider
2. Their prey being bigger
3. Niche
4. A Humans looking for food
4. B Decreasing
5. Natural selection has had an increase in dark moths and a decrease in light moths